

WHY?

frontiers^{SI}

With love and respect, inviting all Muslim peoples to follow Jesus.

There are still places in the world where Jesus Christ is not known.

Entire people groups are without believers, churches, or anyone to share the Gospel. That means billions of men, women, and children may never hear the Good News.

The goal of missions is for God to be worshiped by “every tribe, people, and language” (Revelation 7:9). Christ sends us out to make disciples of all nations (Matthew 28:19) and to proclaim His glory to the ends of the earth (Acts 1:8).

Why missions?

Because someone needs to tell them about Jesus.

Worship is the goal and the fuel of missions:

Missions exists because worship doesn't.

*Missions is our way of saying: the joy of knowing Christ is not a private, or tribal, or national or ethnic privilege.
It is for all. And that's why we go.*

— John Piper

Muslims make up almost 25% of the world's population. But few of them have the chance to hear and respond to the Gospel.

God uses goers and senders to spread the message of hope and launch new movements of faith in Christ among Muslims. Imagine what could happen if one family follows Jesus, then two, then four, and so on—until there's a thriving population of believers in every single Muslim people group.

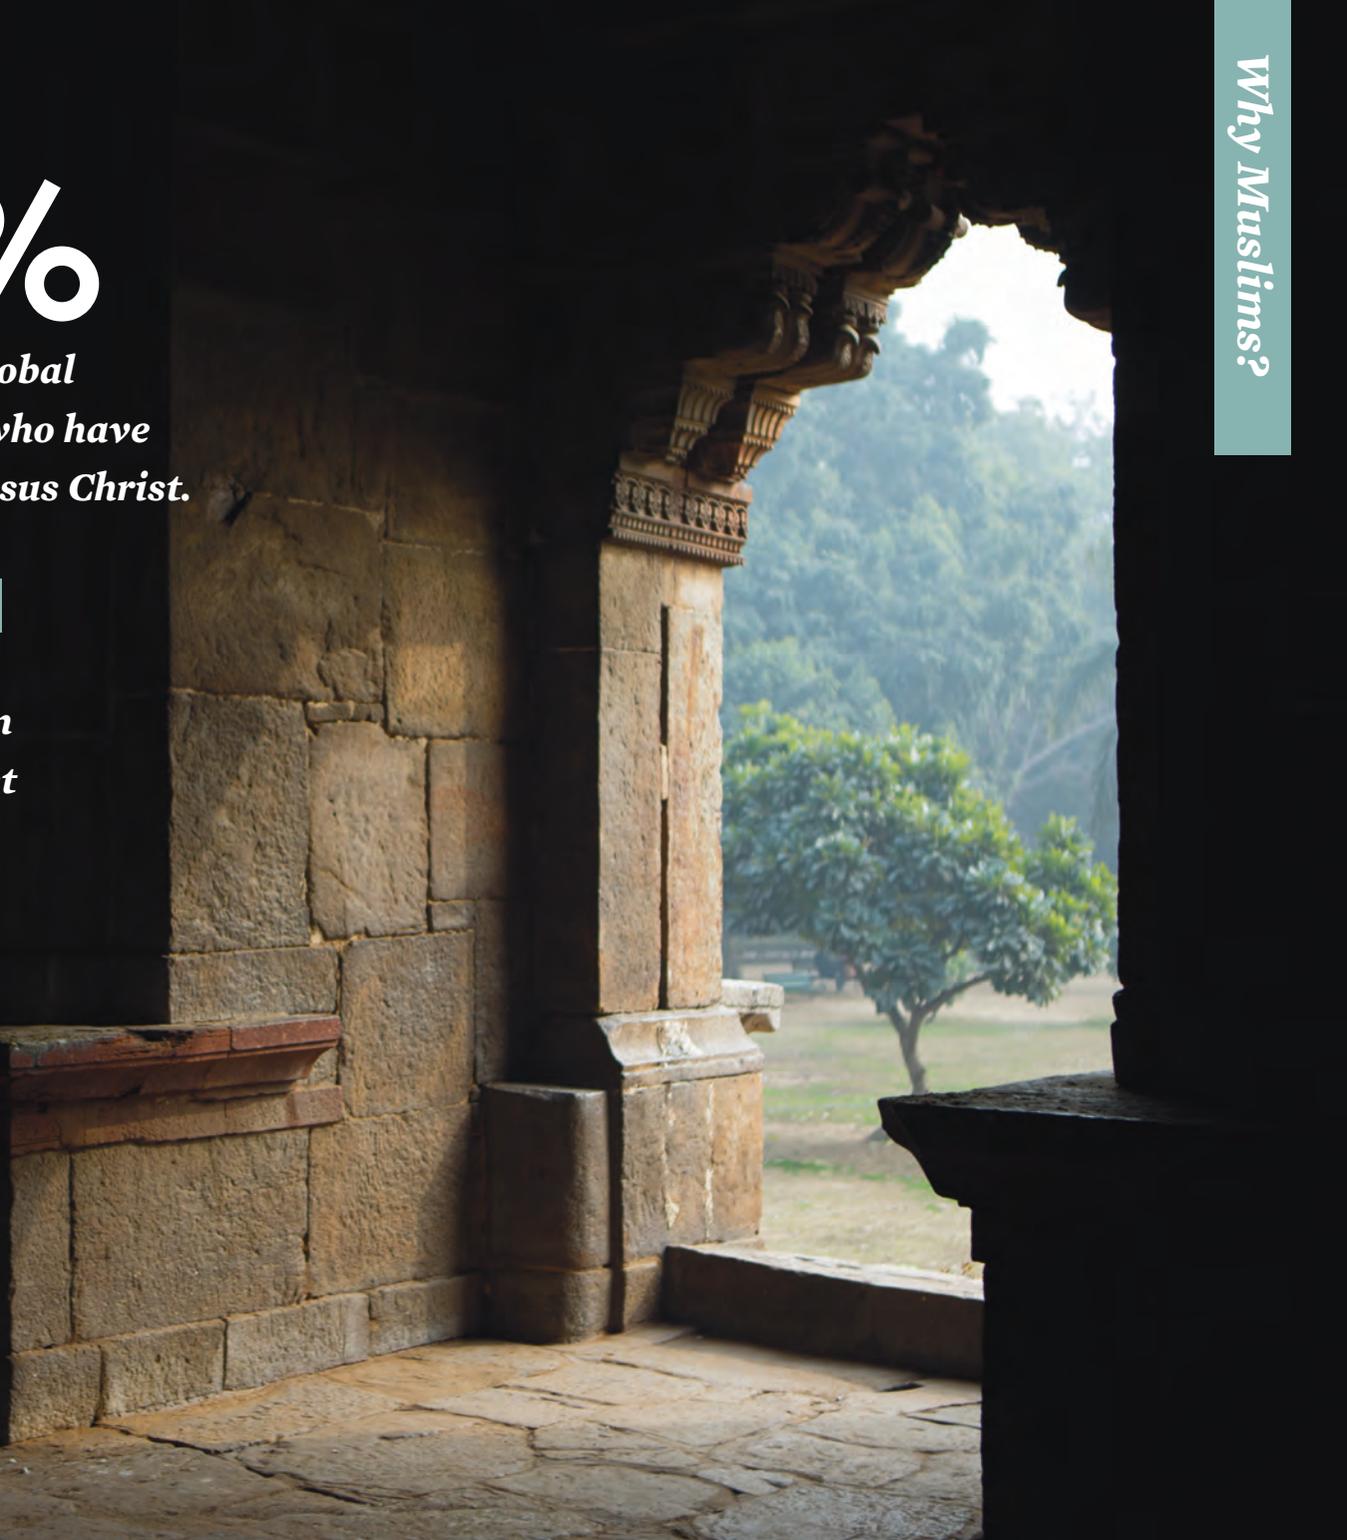

Why Muslims?

Because everyone needs Jesus.

Only 3% of global workers go to those who have never heard about Jesus Christ.

There are only four missionaries per one million people in regions with the least access to the Gospel—like the Muslim world.

The Muslim world faces some of the greatest burdens and social injustices of our time: political unrest, religious violence, human trafficking, and crushing urban poverty.

Yet more Muslims have come to know and follow Christ in the last 20 years than in the previous 1400 years combined. In our generation, technology is creating new ways to communicate Good News to people who were once difficult to reach.

These shifting realities offer urgent, unparalleled opportunities to share the eternal hope, freedom, and healing of Christ with Muslims.

Why Now?

Because the work's not done.

Missionaries often cite agency support as the reason they thrive. An agency with a team of coaches—who understand the situations and struggles faced on the field—can help workers navigate opportunities and challenges with grace and hope.

Those on the field benefit from extensive training, ongoing mentoring and support, and vital pastoral care when they go with Frontiers, which has more than 35 years of experience preparing workers for lasting impact.

Why an Agency?

Because no one is meant to go alone.

Frontiers is made up of ordinary men and women who passionately use their unique personalities, experiences, and skills to make Jesus known among all Muslims. As a spiritual community, Frontiers is committed to continuous coaching and upgrading, so each person is equipped, empowered, and energized for the mission.

Frontiers' field-led approach allows team leaders in nearly 50 countries to develop informed strategies based on the realities of their local environment.

Everything Frontiers does leads to planting healthy, reproducing churches and making disciples of Jesus Christ in the Muslim world.

Why Frontiers?

Because you'll have a front row seat on the cutting edge of God's Kingdom.
